FROM THE RECTOR

Don't let fears hand terrorists a victory

IT SEEMS reasonable to suspect the horrific bombing of the Boston Marathon was the work of Islamic fundamentalists or their sympathizers. At the time of writing, however, no suspected culprits had been publicly identified.

Not surprisingly, immediately after the explosion federal and local law enforcement agencies went on high alert.

In Baltimore and the surrounding counties police patrols were increased at sites deemed to be strategically important. At the same time, an extra and highly visible police presence was planned for the Orioles' three day set with the Tampa Bay Rays, which started the day after the bombing, and for the Sole of the City 10K on the weekend.

The whole purpose of terrorism, as Vladimir Illyich Lenin, a leading exponent, so succinctly explained, "is to terrorize." In short, it is a means by which a cruel and ruthless minority seeks to impose its will upon the majority.

A primary aim of the terrorists is to force federal and local authorities to institute draconian security measures that disrupt the life of the average citizen to such a degree that faith in the established government is utterly undermined.

In this regard, a foretaste of things possibly to come can be seen in the long and dismal lines at the security check points at the nation's airports. If similar measures were to be adopted for all open-air events, the obstacle course they would create would make life almost intolerable.

This, of course, is precisely what the terrorists hope to achieve – to wear government and people down until capitulation to their demands seems an acceptable price of peace.

Thus, prudent though tight security measures may seem, they must not come at the price of eroding our constitutional rights and freedoms. It would be tragic were they to do so – for it would simply be handing the terrorists the victory they are so desperately seeking. GPH

Lack of manners = murder

AN EXAMPLE of the sort of panic terrorism is intended to engender can be seen in the hysterical debate and rushed legislation that has followed on the heels of the hideous school massacre at Newtown, Connecticut.

Regardless of one's opinions on gun control – pro and contra – it should be clear that none of the proposed or enacted legislation would have prevented this or other acts of terrorism.

Terrorists and the murderously deranged will always find a means of carrying out their evil designs – if not a gun, a bomb; if not a bomb some other weapon. Indeed, the day of the Newtown killings came news from China of a man carving up nearly 40 children with a knife,

That said, the real question we should be addressing is what explains the horrific murder toll particularly in the nation's inner cities.

One reason worth considering is the total absence in manners that is rapidly becoming the norm across the entire social spectrum. But while the problem is by no means confined to a single ethnic group or minority, nowhere is the situation worse than in the inner city and backwoods communities where an absence of manners is greatly exacerbated by swiftly shrinking vocabularies.

My epiphany on this came in New York City more than 30 years ago, when I was strolling along 34th Street from east to west making my leisurely way to Pennsylvania Station.

Ahead of me was a young man scurrying along, head down, never looking up, in typical New York fashion. Scurrying towards him, heads down and equally oblivious to their surroundings, was a young couple.

The inevitable happened. The woman was almost bowled off her feet, but the young man simply hurried on head down, as though nothing had happened. In a flash, the young woman's companion knocked to the ground and proceeded to bash his head on the pavement.

I was younger, more foolhardy and an awful lot fitter in those days. Trusting in the protection of my dog collar, I yanked the young woman's companion up by the scruff of his neck.

"It was a complete accident," I explained, "He's really very sorry – aren't you?" The man underneath nodded, looking utterly bewildered. "Tell her you're sorry then," I told him.

"Sorry, lady," he gasped.

"There you are. No harm done, Shake hands and be friends," I instructed.

Hands were shaken, albeit somewhat gingerly, and the parties went their own separate ways. That word "sorry" had saved one young man from a prolonged hospital stay or possibly a trip to the morgue and the other the likelihood of a long spell in jail. GPH

COLLECTS FOR THE Third Sunday after Easter and St. Mark the Evangelist

Almighty God, who showest to them that are in error the light of thy truth, to the intent that they may return into the way of righteousness; Grant unto all those who are admitted into the fellowship of Christ's Religion, that they may avoid those things that are contrary to their profession, and follow all such things as are agreeable to the same; through our Lord Jesus Christ.

AMEN

O almighty God, who has instructed thy holy Church with the heavenly doctrine of thy Evangelist Saint Mark; Give us grace that, being not like children carried away with every blast of vain doctrine, we may be established in the truth of thy holy Gospel; through Jesus Christ our Lord.
